

ABSTRACT

An arterial graft device and a process for positioning the same, wherein said device comprises a first part positioned by conventional techniques within the artery, and a second part positioned on the first part by guiding means which are provided on the first part so as to prevent a catheter guidewire- whereby said second part is positioned in place - from deviating and damaging arterial walls.